

DocSarah

Posted by Kim - 26 May 2011 22:50

Firstly, my heartfelt thanks to all of you who have sent your thoughts and prayers for DocSarah at this difficult time for her. I was lucky enough to speak briefly to her this week and she is getting there. Just because you're a doctor doesn't mean you can cope any better with pain and suffering with any condition.

Secondly, she has given me an email address for an update on Lidocaine/Procaine IV treatments which has been on the social websites recently. (Don't ask me how to socially engage up there, unless small (grand)child sits here being very smug). The only article on this website not by DocSarah was Prof Daymond's on that subject. (It's in Serendipity and has had over 50 hits this week, as a result).

Lastly, maybe it's my paranoia but I did reply to an email this week which I was not too sure about. However, I directed them back to the website and the search button. Put in any words and you can get lots of references you can go too.

This was about Cauda Equina syndrome and Sexual Dysfunction both dealt with extensively. I hope, in the absence of DocSarah it was of some help to them. If it was a spoof, then let me tell you I neither need Viagra or a Boob job:laugh:

Got some updates coming up and will report back to you.

Best wishes to all

Kim

=====