

DocSarah (who else)

Updated the Front Page with a link to DocSarah getting her award

www.arthritiscare.org.uk/InyourArea/Sout...iamondJubileeawards. She's the one on the left with a big knife in her hand BTW

She has also been nominated for UK Arthritis Professional of the Year. Go for it girl.

I am going to change some of the 'more' articles to have a dip into, over the weekend. Would have done today but.....☺

Need a clear head for that sort of thing:S

Trying a new link. Ann tells me the last one didn't work on the Forum. It did on the Front Page!

Good today tho', so can post tomorrow. That spine-health.com site you sent the link to me was really scary. Are people that naive? Got to get the Doc off the fence on this one. What do you think my chances are. Stop 'lurking' and answer me! I am going to try and follow up your links but everyone is in bed when I am awake. Well, true to form if you see me I am just 'thenevitt' lurking myself and I so much want to post but would they want to listen? Thanks for the favourites buttons but I have forgotten how to get to pick up yahoo mail, never mind Hotmail. Terminal case, just stick to what I know. This website is still my baby, growing up!!

OK so I forgot about the two little men on the Start button which take me there. How much shame and embarrassment can someone cope with? Thank you Ann again. Alright so you put yahoo mail in my favourites. At least I remembered one star - go to groups and two stars to save to favourites. So now I can lurk with the best of them. Still don't feel like I should interfere and post tho'. Some of the posts are really so sad and remind me of the years I spent of the Telephone Helpline. Emotional Overload springs to mind. Can't go there again.

Looking forward to the Support Group meeting Friday and will post again.
